A message to our pupils:

I am thoroughly looking forward to standing on the school gate on Monday morning, ready to welcome ALL of our wonderful pupils back into school. I look forward to catching up with each and every one of you to see how you've grown and find out about your time away from school.

Proud

In preparation for children returning to school next week, we have created a display - taking pride of place outside my office - to celebrate and remember all of the wonderful work undertaken at home. If we were to include every example of excellent work sent into school, I'm certain that all walls in school would be covered!

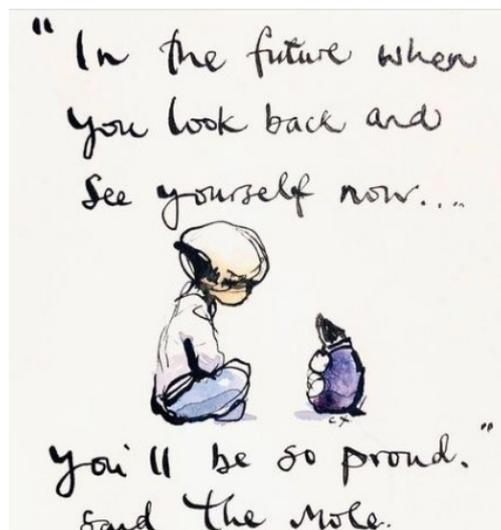

Despite the hurdles put in their way over recent months, our children continue to astound me on a daily basis and I am immensely proud of their accomplishments. As we look to the future, let us not forget how our community came together, in uncertain times, with the shared ambition of ensuring that learning continued in a meaningful way for our children. We are incredibly grateful to our families for their support. I am committed to building on the firm foundations forged in recent months and harnessing the potential of our collaboration as we look to the future.

Have a restful and relaxing weekend.

Yours sincerely,

Mr James

IT'S WORLD BOOK DAY!

At Malvern, we need little persuasion to celebrate and showcase our love of reading. This year, World Book Day provided a fabulous opportunity for children— both working remotely and in school- to come together in celebration. Through difficult times, our love of reading has transported us to magical worlds and far-away places. We have met characters who invoke feelings of kindness, compassion, empathy or distrust. We have deepened our knowledge and understanding and broadened horizons and ambitions. It has been wonderful to see our children indulging their love of books. I'm certain you'll agree that they all look splendid!

To end world book day Sophia chose to read my favourite book when I was just a little bit younger than her. Still hanging in there after many years of reading!! @malvernprimary @MrPhillipsMPS

Congratulations!

Well done to all of our pupils who have achieved Rock Star, Rock Legend and Rock Hero status this week in school. We are incredibly proud of you all!
