

Newsletter

Dear Malvern Families,

Apologies for the delayed newsletter. We have been awaiting some exciting information and I am pleased to confirm that the results are in. Malvern is officially Top of the Rocks!

On Friday, we celebrated Number Day 2023 with all children invited to 'Dress up for Digits'. Number Day is celebrated throughout the UK by NSPCC to raise awareness and funds for a fantastic cause. To promote the day, all schools were invited to compete in an NSPCC Rocks Times Tables competition and - once again - our amazing children proved just how talented they are! Nearly 3000 primary and secondary schools took part and I am delighted to report that Malvern finished in first place nationally in all categories.

As a school, we answered the most multiplication and division calculations correctly - amassing a staggering 523,464 correct answers! We also finished with the highest overall school average score and ended with an astonishing six classes finishing in the top seven classes across the country.

A special mention to 6IP who, out of just over 17,000 classes nationally, finished in first place. At the time of writing, the individual pupil results have not been finalised but I anticipate many Malvern pupils will have achieved exceptionally well. The children at Malvern never fail to amaze me with their enthusiasm and effort but this week's outstanding achievements have blown me away.

I am one incredibly proud Headteacher!

Mr. James
Headteacher

We're Going on a Bear Hunt

This term, children in reception have enjoyed reading 'We're Going on a Bear Hunt.' To launch the topic, children and their cuddly companions enjoyed a teddy bear picnic. When arriving back to their classroom, the children spotted some unusual footprints! Footprints that looked like they belonged to a bear! There was also a letter that explained Mr. Bear was looking for friends. The children searched for Mr. Bear but, unfortunately, he couldn't be found. To help with their quest, reception children decided to travel to Court Hey Park to look for Mr. Bear but he wasn't there either! Eventually, Mr. Bear was spotted on the school grounds waving at the children before disappearing.

Attendee of the Week

Lois always tries her very best in school and we are so proud of all the progress she is making. Last week, Lois went out to a hospital appointment and showed real bravery and resilience by having a needle and coming back to school. It is this dedication to her school life that has made Lois our Attendee of the Week.

Well done, Lois, keep up all the hard work!
