

Memory Box

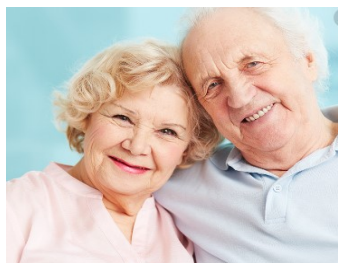

Design &

History

What are the stages of life/ development?	Babies are born, then they become toddlers, then children, then teenagers, then adults and finally elderly.
What can a baby do?	A baby can laugh, make noises, grab things and roll over.
What can a toddler do?	A toddler can stand up, speak, kick a ball and scribble.
What can a child do?	A child can draw, write, tell the time and ride a bike.
What can an adult do?	An adult can drive, vote, get married and buy a house.
How have toys changed over time?	Toys have changed in lots of ways. Lots of toys now are made from plastic and can be moved by remote control or require batteries.

What are memories?	Memories are something remembered from the past.
What is a memory box?	A memory box is a box used for storing memories and precious objects in such as photographs.
Why would someone have a memory box?	People have memory boxes to help them remember important things from their past or special times or special events.

VOCABULARY
development	To grow and go through different stages in life.
significant	A significant memory is one that is important and means something.
chronological	Chronological order means the order which something happened in.
precious	A precious object is something that is very important to you and means a lot to you.